

Our society's lack of understanding of mental illness and resources for it, is economically and sociologically unsustainable, as exemplified in The Drug War and related policies.

